

Tobacco Use Prevention Education (TUPE) Presents:

Facilitating (Non-therapeutic) Support Groups to Reduce Tobacco, Vaping, and Other Drug Use

In this experiential training, you will learn how to:

- Identify the characteristics of resilience within at-risk behaviors
- Understand how youth and adults play out family roles at school and in other public settings and why
- Use the stages of group process to build communication and social skills
- Manage behavior in group in a way that builds skills, promotes learning, and respect
- Maintain the line between support and therapy in group settings
- Integrate what group members are learning with norms and expectations for behavior in school, work, and social settings
- Apply these skills using a youth empowerment curriculum designed to reduce vaping and related behaviors (based on the Stanford Toolkit)
